Phoebe Cousins Not Reinstated.

Chicago, May 10.—Now that the weather man has let his machine slip a cog or two, either by design or mistake, the attendance at the exposition is beginning to climb up to pleasing figures. All day crowds moved over the elegant pavements watching the gondolas and electric launches glide over the glassy surface of the pretty lagoons, while many thousands more were taking in the sights in the main buildings and on the Midway plaisance. The latter place is becoming more popular every day, and when the summer weather, for which Chicago is famous, gets settled down to a sense of its responsibilities the plaisance and avenues of the exposition will be alive with enough spectators.

An agent representing a famous clown was on Midway plaisance this morning looking for a location for one of the most unique schemes to rake in the luscious dolunique schemes to rake in the luscious dollar heard of yet in connection with the exposition. Some months ago an eastern rubber firm was given an order to manufacture a life sized Jersey cow, mounted over fine steel wire netting. When the artificial cow was finished it was touched up with paint, making it quite genuine looking and hard to distinguish at a distance from a real cow. The event of the day was the dedication of the Vermont state building. The Green Mountain people are very proud of the unique little building which will be their headquarters during the exposition. The usual ceremonies were observed, state officials declaring the building open and holding a reception which was largely attended by all who could claim descent from Vermont stock. The Vermont Press association helped to swell the attendance very considerably.

Among the exhibits at the exposition was a national bank under suspension. The

THE REPUBLICAN LEAGUE.

It Gracefully Accepts the Hospitalities of Kentucky Democracy.

Louisville, May 10.—The representatives of the young Republicans of the nation have taken the leading city of the Democratic bine grass state by storm. All day long, resplendent in vari-colored badges, indicative at once of the faith within them, and of the locality from which they hall, they have had possession of the central streets. While the hotels have surrendered to their invasion, and, packed in some cases six to a room, they are deep in the slumbers of victory, when the Democratic mayor of the falls city bids them thrice welcome and tells them that they are welcome to the best and choicest of Kentucky hospitality the capitulation will have been complete. All the indications point to the fact that this will be the largest convention of the National League of Republican Clubs that has been held since the birth of that organization. The event is also notable for the large attendance of men that for years have been prominent in the councils of the older heads of the party. In this particular the scenes were a reminder of the eve of the assembling of a Republican presidential convention. But many of those whose presence had been confidently relied upon have found it impossible from one cause or another to put in an appearance. Among these are ex-President Harrison, ex-Vice President Morton, Governor Mc-Kinley, ex-Governor Foraker. Thomas B. Reed, ex-Senator Spooner and Henry Cabot Lodge. The suggestion, however, that their absence is occasioned by any lukewarmness or the belief that it is yet too early to commence to lay plans for future Republican success is emphatically, repudiated by General Clarkson and his colleagues.

The meeting of the National Republican committee divides interest with that of the Republican success is emphatically, repudiated by General Clarkson and his colleagues.

The meeting of the National Republican committee divides interest with that of the league. Concerning this gathering there is an air of mystery. None of the members on the ground, from Chairman Thomas H. Carter down, will admit that they know just what they are likely to do beyond the fact that they will review the political situation as it affects the Republican party, exchange opinions regarding the causes of last year's defeat, and possibly embody their conclusions in an address to the country.

Headquarters were opened at a local hotel by Mrs. J. Ellen Foster of Iowa, as the solitary delegate of the Woman's Republican league. As she cannot hold a convention all by herself she proposes to assert her right to be seated as a member of the league convention proper.

The Georgia Bicyclers.

ATLANTA, May 10.—The bicycle race from Atlanta to Chicago between Ed. M. Durant and Walter Howard, newspaper men of this city, is concluded. The men left Atlanta two weeks ago, Howard starting two hours in advance of Durant. Under the terms of the agreement the one who made the distance in the shortest who made the distance in the shortest time was to be declared winner. The trip has been a hard one, most of it being made in rain and mud. It has been more a test in rain and mud. It has been more a test of endurance than skill. Durant caught up with Howard at Rome, and again they were together at Louisville and Indianapolis. Howard got out of Indianapolis first, but Durant caught up with him again and they rode to their destination in Chicago. Durant won with two hours to spare

To Educate the Deaf and Dumb.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The institution which was founded and endowed a few years ago in this city by Professor Alexander Graham Bell for the increase and diffusion of knowledge relating to the deaf, is to have a new home. The institution is styled the Volta Bureau, and in the past two or three years has issued a number of valuable books upon the education of the deaf. The work of the bureau has increased to such up extent that it has been creased to such an extent that it has been creased to such an extent that it has been found necessary to provide new quarters. To this end ground was broken on the northeast corner of Thirty-fifth and Q streets for the proposed building. The first sod was turned by Miss Helen Keller, the remarkable deaf and blind girl.

Bear Chase In Chicago.

Bear Chase In Chicago.

Chicago, May 10.—The big grizzly bear recently placed in Lincoln park escaped from his den and had to be choked to death before he could be overcome by the police, who sought to capture him and haul him back to the pit. Since his arrival at the park two weeks ago this ferocious grizzly has kept up a continuous fight with the three other bears in the pit. They forced him to remain in a tree, and it is surmised that he made his escape by climbing out over the bars when attacked by the trio of savage animals. The capture was very exciting.

RANKS AS A WONDER OF THE WORLD

A Canal Through the Crimean Plain More Than Three Thousand Years Old-Marvelous Masonry Constructed By the Hands of Savages

WASHINGTON, May 10.—A letter from the distinguished Russian engineer, Melni-koff, to the Smithsonian institution, an-nounces for the first time in this country nounces for the first time in this country an interesting discovery. It tells of an archaeological discovery that ranks as one of the wonders of the world.

The Russian government a short time ago undertook to survey a route for a canal between the Black sea and the Sea of Azof. Melnikoff was assigned to this task and during its performance he discovered the remains of a great ditch of high antiquity, built on marvelous proportions by savage hands and near 3,000 years old. It is second in age only to the great pyramids of Egypt.

savage hands and near 3,000 years old. It is second in age only to the great pyramids of Egypt.

For the most part the course of the great excavation through the Crimean plain has been obliterated by the ravages of time, but it can be traced for the distance of six miles. Its discovery explains many historic remains which hitherto could not be accounted for. Search has been made in history for some account of its building, and the Russian concludes it was probably constructed in the seventh century B. C., by Assande I of Bosphorus, who was a powerful ruler of those times in that then barbarous country. Nothing is said, however, of the purpose which so great a work, requiring such a vast amount of labor, served. It is also probably referred to by Strobo and Pliny, ancient Roman writers, but in indefinite terms.

The canal excites the interest not so much as the marvelous fortifications which lined its banks and protected its terminals at either sea. It was payed the entire much as the marvelous fortifications which lined its banks and protected its terminals at either sca. It was paved the entire length with stones, through a country where rocks are unknown, and which must have been brought a considerable distance. The bottom, before the channel was filled with earth-as the years passed by, measured about 25 feet, and had an average depth below the surrounding surface of 20 to 30 feet. to 30 feet.

Castles and Towers.

One would suppose that this great water course was a roadway for vessels between the two seas, it being a much shorter route for the crafts of old than sailing around the isthmus, but this is not certain, for the savages who built it were not engaged, so far as is known, in commerce.

far as is known, in commerce.

At either end were strong castles, which are now in ruins, but it can be remembered when, in this century, parts of them were standing. They are built of stone. During the Crimean war, which began in 1854, a part of these stones were carried away to construct hospitals for the soldiers. The massive remains of these castles now measure over 750,000 cubic meters. Along the banks of the canal extending through the plain was a wall capped with Along the banks of the caual extending through the plain was a wall capped with many towers, but hardly a vestige now remains of these. In the center of the canal—which, except at this point, was as straight as an arrow—there was a huge fortification of four sides, three of which were protected by the canal. At this point there was also a smaller canal, which, situated outside the larger, afforded additional protection. tional protection.

Mentioned By the Greeks.

Mentioned By the Greeks.

Xenophon, a famous Athenian who conducted the retreat of the 10,000 Greeks, tells in his history of ditches which were dug across the plains by the enemy to impede their march through the hostile territory, and sometimes water was let into them by night as a further hindrance. It may be that this curious feat of ancient engineering served as a monstrous wall and moat for protection from enemies. Certainly this was a strategic point.

The ancient Cimmerians, a savage people, inhabited this region formerly and built this canal. They were without laws

The ancient Cimmerians, a savage people, inhabited this region formerly and built this canal. They were without laws or literature, so far as any records of their own come down to us. All travelers who came to them were sacrificed to their heathen gods, and hence it is that the digging of this great ditch, which for its time rivals the Suez canal, is shrouded in deep mostery.

Mugwumps Excite Comment.

Washington, May 10.—The political gossips are speculating upon the simultaneous arrivals in the city of two prominent converts to Democracy, Wayne McVeagh and Carl Schurz. They are both here, but it not known whether their visit has any significance or not. "Humph" grunted an old Democratic war-horse at one of the uptown hotels, "I suppose the mugwumps will be invited to the White House and given a front seat in the synagogue while we the faithful can cool our heels on the pavement and read the president's rules. Up to a late hour however, neither Mr. Schurz nor Mr. McVengh has presented himself at the White House.

Act of a Brave Young Lady.

BLADENSBURG, Md., May 10. — Dr. Roger's residence, Parthenon Heights, near here, caught fire from a burning chimney. Wherever the sparks or burning soot fell a fire arose, everybody being absent but Miss Cora, the doctor's youngest daughter (except her invalid mother). She carried buckets full of water to the est daughter (except her invalid mother). She carried buckets full of water to the blazing roof, and kept the fire in subjection until help came in response to her cries. To get to the high roof Miss Rogers had to make a dangerous and difficult ascent, and it is believed her courage and presence of mind saved the house from destruction.

They found the house barricaded and forced their way in. They were met with a volley of bullets from the Hungarians, one of which struck Constable Schade in the arm, while a woman dashed a skillet full of hot grease in the face of Officer South, scalding him terribly. The officers not being armed went to Irvin, deputized a posse, and returned. This time they found the Hungarians up stairs with drawn revolvers. As the officers started up stairs they were meet with another volley of bullets. They returned the fire, and for awhile the bullets flew as thick as hail. Chemical National Bank Fallure.

Chemical National Bank Fathure.
Chicago, May 10.—The Chemical National bank has suspended business, and President J. A. Curry says it is doubtful if the concern will attempt to resume. A statement made by President Curry to several creditors that gained access to him had a quieting effect on the remainder o the depositors. "Within four or five days we will have enough money to pay one-third of our depositors," said Mr. Curry, "and in time every creditor will receive third of our depositors," said Mr. Curry,
"and in time every creditor will receive 100 cents on the dollar. The reason we suspended business was because the extraordinarily heavy runs of Saturday and Monday exhausted our present resources, and we believed the fairest, most honorable way to do was to quit now when we could without harming anybody." The

It was written in a bold and steady hand, without any apparent evidence of nervousness on any of the three sheets of legal c_p. He made an elaborate review of the case and declaree his innocence. The report that Harris had threatened to take his life last Saturday or at any other time is discredited here. Those who have investigated the matter call attention to the fact that with his knowledge of surgery Aarris might very easily have given himself a fatal wound. The remains of Harris arrived here and were at once taken from the depot to the Albany Rural cemetery, where they were interred in the presence of his mother, his brother and those who had followed the party from Sing Sing.
